HARLAY AVOCATS ADVISES QEVLAR AI IN A SEED ROUND BRINGING TOTAL FINANCING TO $14 MILLION

Founded in May 2023, Qevlar AI, which uses artificial intelligence to help companies defend themselves against cyberattacks, completes a seed round bringing total financing to $14 million, led by EQT Ventures and Forgepoint Capital International.

Qevlar AI uses generative AI and aims to protect companies against cyberattacks.

Its solution enables investigations to be carried out autonomously, just like a human being. Qevlar AI is aimed at Europe's largest corporations, as well as MSSPs (Manage Security Service Providers), intermediaries who simplify the management of security services for businesses.

Qevlar AI was founded by Ahmed Achchak, CEO, Hamza Sayah, CTO and Roland de la Chapelle, business advisor.

Thanks to this fundraising, the cybersecurity startup, whose team quadrupled last year, plans to hire over twenty employees while investing in R&D and accelerating its international development, particularly in the United States.

The seed round bringing total financing to $14 million was led by EQT Ventures and Forgepoint Capital International alongside tech and AI business angels such as Olivier Pomel, CEO of Datadog, Florian Douetteau, CEO of Dataiku and Mehdi Ghissassi, former product manager of Google DeepMind.

Thibault Chareton (partner) and Bruno Bernery (associate) of Harlay Avocats advised the company on this round.

Sébastien Pontillo (partner at Morgan, Lewis & Bockius UK LLP) advised the investors.
